EMPLOYEES OF U. S. STEEL CORPORATION

BENEFIT WHEN A DIVIDEND OF $200,000,000 IS PAID

Biggest Christmas Melon Cut In Years—The Firm Has Made Two Billion Dollars In Twenty-Five Years—Gigantic Bull Movement Started In Wall Street Friday.

Directors of the U. S. Steel corporation playing Santa Claus to their own stockholders by cutting a Christmas melon of over $200,000,000, started a gigantic "bull" movement Friday in the New York stock market, which in a single day added hundreds of millions of dollars to the combined market value of leading industrial and railroad securities and spread the Christmas spirit to millions of stockholders.

Common stock of the U. S. Steel corporation changed hands in enormous volume, scoring an extreme gain of 5 5-8 points by touching 160 1/2, the highest price ever recorded, on total sales of over 600,000 shares.

The day's transactions in this issue comprised nearly one-fourth of the day's entire volume of business and involved a turnover of nearly $100,000,000. The stock closed a point below the top, so that the aggregate market value of the 5,083,025 shares outstanding was increased over $23,500,000 during the day.

The new "when issued" stock, which will not be distributed until after the formal approval of the stockholders next spring, was traded in on the New York curb market, selling between 115 and 116 7-8. Based on the average price of the steel dividend it is worth approximately $235,000,000 to the 90,000 stockholders of the corporation.

The day's transaction in U. S. Steel common fell far short of the daily record turnover of 875,000 shares, which was established in the wild market which followed the "leak" on the late President Wilson's peace note, December 21, 1916.

The steel "melon" while representing the partial distribution of an undivided surplus of over $500,000,000, which had been built up since the corporation was established a little over 25 years ago, was widely hailed in brokerage and banking circles as an expression of confidence in the business outlook for 1927.

While no dividend action on the new stock will be taken before the April meeting of directors, Wall street recalled that last spring Chairman Elbert H. Gary, in discussing the possibility of a stock dividend, said:

"Of course if this were done it would add to the amount of dividends on the common stock."

This statement of the veteran head of the corporation was used as the basis for the hope that the present $7 annual rate, which is equivalent to $9.80 on the present issue, would be maintained on the new stock.

Earnings of the corporation have exceeded two billion dollars under Mr. Gary's management, the average for the 10-year period ending in 1925 being $18.26 a share.

While huge blocks of steel common stock regarded as a gilt edge business man's investment for the last decade or longer, are held by large banks, insurance companies and wealthy individuals, numerically nearly half of the corporation's stockholders are employees, ranging from Chairman Gary to day laborers in the mills.

The stock is one of the most widely distributed in the country, if not in the world, one of the most distinguished stockholders being President Coolidge, who was listed in the last annual list of stockholders as the owner of 50 shares.

Employees of the corporation subscribed for 70,000 shares of stock earlier in the year at $136 a share. Subsequently, they saw it go down over 10 points below that figure but few men sold and their confidence in the corporation apparently has been justified by the recent sharp appreciation in value.

While stock market observers realized that a distribution on steel common was only a matter of time, few of them expected it Thursday. Even when reports of a special meeting of directors were confirmed, the rumors that it was called to act on the proposed resignation of Chairman Gary found more believers that those suggesting a possible "Christmas dividend," which explains the heavy selling of the stock Thursday afternoon after an opening display of strength.

While Gary's plans are known only to himself, the stock dividend announcement put a stop, temporarily at least to the reports of his retirement.

A. B. FALL AND H. F. SINCLAIR FACING TRIAL

Were Indicted as Result of Leasing of the Teapot Dome Naval Reserve in Wyoming.

The scheduled arraignment of Albert B. Fall and Harry F. Sinclair, oil millionaire, on charges of conspiracy to defraud the government, was postponed until next Tuesday by Justice Jennings Bailey in district supreme court.

A crowded court docket caused the change in plans after Sinclair and his large staff of lawyers, as well as attorneys representing Fall, had waited outside the court room for more than an hour.

The two men were indicted as a result of the leasing of the Teapot Dome Naval Reserve in Wyoming to Sinclair's Oil company. The transaction took place when Fall was secretary of the interior.

The former cabinet minister was not in court, his attorneys having arranged with government counsel to have him notified as soon as his presence was needed.

Tuesday's arraignment will be preceded by an hour's argument by prosecution and defense counsel on a demurrer filed by Sinclair's attorneys. The court told the attorneys that as soon as the demurrer is disposed of he will hear the pleas of the defendants.

Mr. Fall and Edward L. Doheny were resting Friday following their acquittal of a conspiracy charge growing out of the leasing of Ekl Hills Naval Reserve.

The Doheny family will return to Los Angeles, where they will have a Christmas reunion.

Army More Religious Than Civilians, Claim

Washington—The army is more religious than the rest of the country, according to the army chaplains.

Figures presented by Chief Chaplain John T. Axton in his annual report showed a total attendance of more than 1,800,000 at army religious services during the year, or an average of 13 times for every soldier. Though statistics for the entire country are not available, this average is believed much higher than for civilian church attendance.

DYE GROOMING GOVERNOR VIC FOR PRESIDENT

"Feeler" Was Bid For Support —Smith and McAdoo are "Impossible"

In a carefully worded statement issued at Washington Thomas E. Dye, chairman of the Democratic state committee of Ohio, all but projected Governor A. V. Donahey of Ohio, into the contest for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1928.

Instead of launching a genuine Donahey for president boom, as was predicted before he came to Washington, Dye mere put forth "a feeler" that was interpreted immediately as an indirect bid for support of the presidential candidacy of Ohio's third term governor.

Dye definitely allied himself with the forces in the Democratic party that are seeking to forestall the nomination of Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York, thereby strengthening the belief in Smith quarters that the Donahey candidacy is being brought forth at the time as part of a nationwide campaign to check the spread of Smith sentiment.

The Ohio chairman was careful to disclaim authority to speak for Governor Donahey, but the effect of his statement was to place the Donahey movement in the same category with others of like nature, which have for its object the elimination of Governor Smith as a presidential possibility.

After professing admiration for New York's governor and a desire to see him in the White House, Dye dismissed his chances and those of William G. McAdoo, of California, with the one word "impossible." In his opinion their elimination from consideration is essential to Democratic success in 1928. He reaches this conclusion regretfully "from a devotion to the Democratic party and its patriotic mission to our country."

Denmark Bans Poker; Players Cry "Misdeal!"

Copenhagen.—Danish poker players are not at all satisfied with the Supreme court's decree today, outlawing stud, as well as draw, poker. They contend that their case was lost on a technicality, and that they, therefore, are entitled to another deal, or rather, hearing. The court held that poker was unlawful, as it came within the meaning of the prohibiting gambling clause of the penal code.

Age and WeightMany authorities agree that after a person passes the age of thirty he should weigh from 10 to 20 per cent less than the weight given on scales as average. They explain that after that age a person has ceased to grow and does not need extra weight for building. It is, therefore, deemed un-

Admirers of Florence Vidor will be amazed and happy when they see screenom's newest star in her first Paramount starring vehicle, "You Never Know Women" which comes to the Met on Monday.

They will be amazed at the woman's marvelous transformation, "The Orchid Beauty of the Screen" has at last blossomed out. Those who were delighted by the artistry she evidenced in "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter" will again have something to "write home about."

As the Russian vaudeville dancer, Miss Vidor has a chance to wear many gorgeous costumes, while the action gives the star a real opportunity to display her histrionic ability.

Featured in the production, which was directed by William Wellman are Clive Brook and Lowell Sherman.

GIFT HINTS

Here are a few suggestions. These articles would add to the comfort and convenience of those receiving them

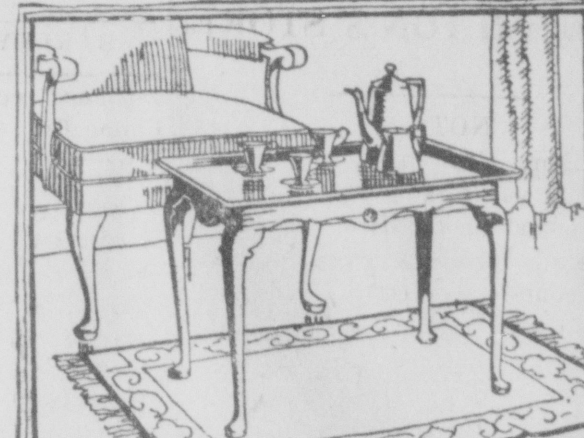

Dad

Would like a huge arm chair, deep, luxuriously soft and spacious enough to really allow stretching. With a stool for tired feet, waiting for him at the end of a busy day, his comfort would be complete.

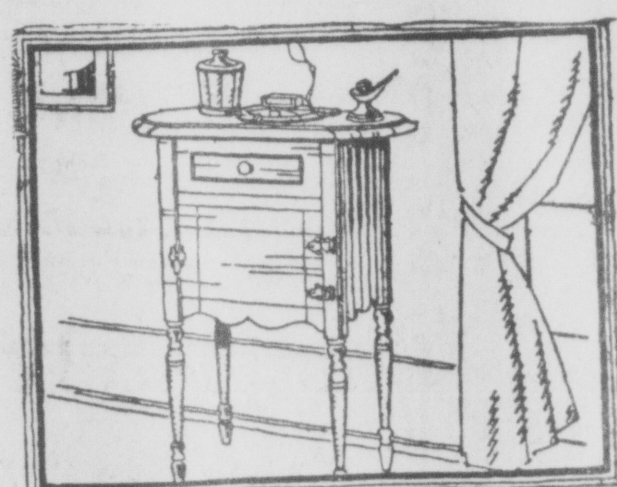

Mother

Would love a tiny table for after dinner coffee to give style and finish to the home she's so proud of and to make serving doubly easy and convenient.

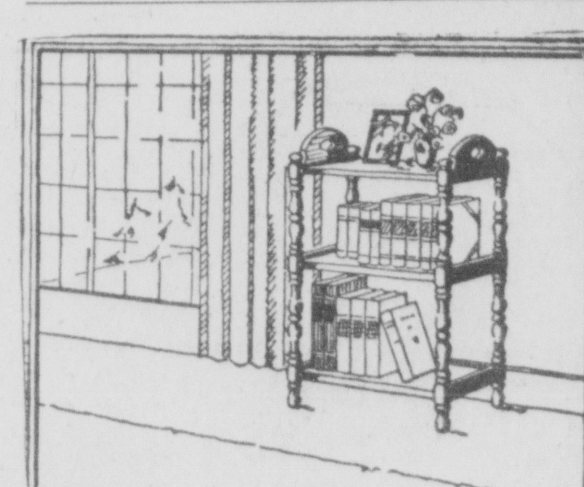

Brother

Would be more than grateful for a smoker, unique in design, to place at the arm of his easy chair, to keep matches and ash tray within easy reach.

Sister

Would adore little lacquered book shelves of her own—one shelf for study books and another for her favorite fiction and latest magazines.

These are but a few of the many, many, nice things in our store. Won't you come in and see them?

MACHINE SEWS ALL, FOUR GENERATIONS

Grandmother's and often great-grandmother's sewing machine is still busily humming for little Willie.

Sewing machines that bear the marks of several generations, new ones, and some that have been discarded and stored in woodshed and attic, are brought to sewing machine clinics. There, under the direction of R. D. Barden, extension specialist in agricultural engineering at the Ohio State University, each woman takes her own machine apart, thoroughly cleans and oils the mechanism, assembles the machine and adjusts it.

The oldest of over 1,000 machines that have been brought to nearly 100 clinics in all parts of the state has been in constant use for 75 years. This machine bears the name of Elias Howe, the inventor of the first sewing machine. Its present owner is Mrs. Amelia Wetmor, Summit County, Ohio.

Many machines, observes Mr. Barden, have been in constant use for from 40 to 60 years. In Belmont county a machine was brought to the clinic for its first "cleaning up" in four generations.

Cleaning and adjusting the machine, as done at the clinic meetings, has put machines back into use that have been discarded 20 years. A machine set away in a Summit County woodshed for several years while a new one ruled the home was put through a clinic meeting. It worked so well after it was cleaned and adjusted that now it is back in the house doing the sewing, and the new machine that was to replace it is standing idle.

HOME FOR HOLIDAYS

With the arrival of the many students for the holiday vacation who have been spending their time at the various schools of learning during the past four months the population of the city has been increased and the spirit of the season has been spurred up a notch or two.

Possibly the first arrival from a distance was Evelyn Adkins who arrived in the city yesterday for the holiday season with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Adkins from Sullins Seminary, Bristol, Va. The greater majority of the students will reach their homes today among them being, Maxine Stevenson, Helen Schiear and Gladys Wentworth from Wooster College, Wooster; Eula Dowden, Carl Leist and Catherine Sanders from Capital University, Columbus; Dwight Weiler and Ralph Barnhart from the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music; George Hitler from Kenyon College, Gambier; George Gerhardt from Ohio Wesleyan, Delaware; Lemuel Weldon from Yale University, New Haven, Connecticut; Helen Snyder from St. Mary's of the Woods, Terre Haute, Ind.; Theodore Goeller from Sewanee Military Institute, Sewanee, Tenn.

Tomorrow will bring a few more in the persons of Iola Wentworth, Hilda Cook and Gardner Wilder from Miami University, Oxford; Mary Walters from Goucher College, Baltimore, Md.; George William Groom and Robert Smith from St. Xavier College, Cincinnati; Paul Adkins from Ohio Northern, Ada, Ohio; Dudley Courtwright from Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H.

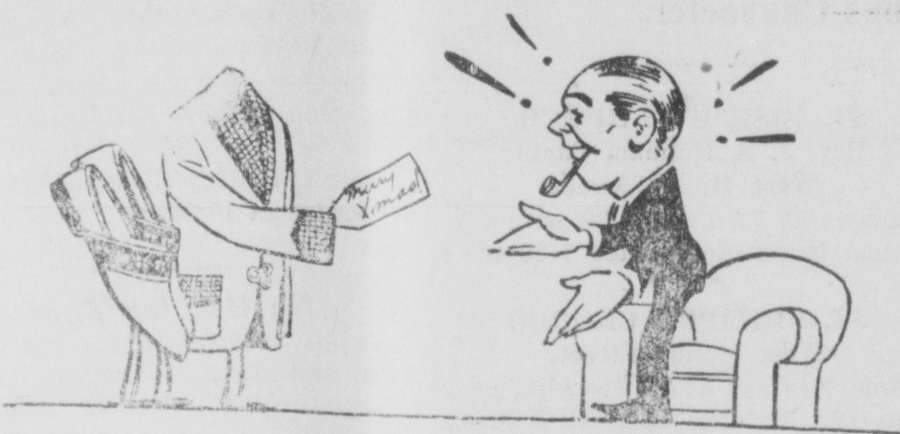

On Monday, David May, David Courtwright, John Courtwright and Renick Caldwell will come from Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.; Hester Bentley from Dennison University, Granville; Alice Ada May will arrive Monday from Goucher College, Baltimore, Md., after spending a few days with her father, E. Lutz May at Clarksburg, W. Va. On next Wednesday Rose Smith will come from Sacred Heart College, Cincinnati and Frances Walling and Marion Hitler from Randolph-Macon College, Lynchburg, Va.

Confusion!

The column man of the Great Bend Tribune says:
"Speaking of confusion of thoughts, there is a son, for instance, who longs to be a prize ball player, while dad has him cut out for a conservative and successful business man. Mother's fond dream is that he may be a noted divine whose eloquence will sweep countless numbers into the kingdom, while sister wishes him out of her sight."

ST. PATRICK'S BELL OLD CHURCH RELIC

Every Irish antiquary, says the Coleraine Chronicle, Ireland, is familiar with that priceless ecclesiastical relic, St. Patrick's bell, the "Clog-Phadrulg," which may be regarded as typical of the early ecclesiastical bells. It weighs merely three pounds eleven ounces, its height is only seven and three-quarter inches and its width at the mouth not five inches. This archaic bell relic, a survival of the ritual of the early Christian church of Ireland, became very celebrated in early ecclesiastical records, and after a most romantic history has outlived the vicissitudes of many centuries.

This shriveled-looking bell relic was enclosed (Circa 1121) by King Domnall O'Lachlainn of the Grianan of Allach, in a superb shrine of Celtic art metal work. This, the most unique relic of the early Christian church of Ireland, is now in the collection of the Royal Irish academy, housed in the National museum, Dublin, and like many other valuable relics of ancient Uladh is an exile from its native province.

It Was the Last Word

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright.)

"So you will not come with us?" demanded Dorothy with a scornful inflection in her tremulous voice. "Mr. Viner says the cave is quite safe to enter. He knows personally that the bear was killed last week."

Her tone and words implied that Tommy Viner might have killed the vicious black bear with his own hands. Viner swelled importantly and Lawrence Allen winced, but his countenance did not betray his thoughts about Viner. His concern for Dorothy Wales' safety was evident.

"I happen to know that the bear was alive this morning and very ugly because there are some cubs inside. Dorothy, I beg you will not go there this morning," he said, while he knew that she would not take his advice. "Come along and protect us, then," laughed Viner, tauntingly. "You may lead the way, eh, Dorothy?"

"Yes," said Dorothy coldly. "I know a better way than that one," muttered Lawrence, who knew the mountain side like an open book, and he vanished around the shoulder of the great rock formation.

"Gone back to Canyon Creek for the ambulance," sneered Viner. "Danager will be over by the time he comes back!"

"Oh!" exclaimed the dazed Dorothy. "Coward, coward!" she said and stamped her foot. "Come on, Tommy. You are not a coward."

Lawrence heard as he made his way among the rocks to that narrow opening near the den of the bears. If he could pry away some of the smaller rocks and enlarge the opening, it would attract the anger of the bears and keep them at this end of the cave. If Dorothy and Viner went in the entrance they would hear the sounds of disturbance and, he prayed, have sense enough left to escape before the enraged beasts discovered their presence. Viner had a rifle over his shoulder, and Lawrence had his own shotgun in evidence.

The word—that last word of Dorothy's rankled like a thorn in his breast as he crept forward. "Coward—coward—coward!"

"This is the end of my case, so far as Dorothy is concerned," he told himself grimly, as he stood before that heap of stone that marked the small hole. "You can't blame any girl for despising a coward!" He wished, however, he might be in the two places at once to protect the girl from her own folly.

With a hard stick he began to pry the stones away from the opening. In a moment he heard an ominous growl from within, and a deeper one at a distance.

He pounded furiously at the loose rocks and in a moment they gave way before a heavy onslaught from within. The she bear was clawing her way out.

He knew that Dorothy was in the cave for he heard her scream, then a great pounding of the earth beside him whirled him about to face the male, an ugly red-eyed brute, foaming with rage at this attack on his home.

Lawrence clubbed his gun and struck the bear on the nose, then he jumped back and fired at the ferocious eyes. The badly wounded animal sprang forward and fell across Larry, knocking him into the bushes and at the same time the she bear broke out and entered the fray.

Dorothy and Viner had already entered the ill-smelling cavern when the sounds of growls in the farthestmost depths told them too plainly that Lawrence had been right. The she bear and her cubs were there—if the male entered the cave behind them, they were trapped.

"If Lawrence had really had a spark of manhood he would not have deserted us this way," whined Viner nervously.

"He is doing something about it, you may be sure," said the girl with surprising coolness.

She screamed as she heard a shot. "He is out there—alone, in danger—coming, Larry, coming!" she called, rushing out of the cave, Viner close at her heels. As they reached the back of the rock pile, she kept on calling. "Coming, Larry—coming, hold on dear!" And Larry, hearing the words through the agony he was suffering, smiled suddenly and thought, "I have those to remember—those last words—that last word!" But he did see things dimly just before he lost consciousness—saw Dorothy snatch Viner's rifle from his futile hands, saw her rush up to the male bear and press the weapon into the thick furry ear and fire. In another moment she was pursuing the she bear back to the squealing cubs. When the clumsy, infuriated beast had shouldered her way back into the cave, to lie there nursing her rage and grief for the loss of her mate, Dorothy went back to Lawrence, lying there so white and still, the dead bear at his feet. She gave the nervous and miserable Viner a terrible look.

"Lawrence has saved our miserable lives, Tommy. I do not think that he is mortally hurt, but do you mind going down to Canyon Creek and asking Doctor Brown to come with his ambulance? My fiancé—" she emphasized the word, "needs his services!"

Viner went, and Lawrence, who had listened dreamily, learned for the first time that Dorothy was indeed going to marry him at last, and he smiled contentedly.

"We will have the bearskin rug for our house," he murmured drowsily.

SNEAK THIEVES

Work In Moonlight and Strip New Ford of Accessories.

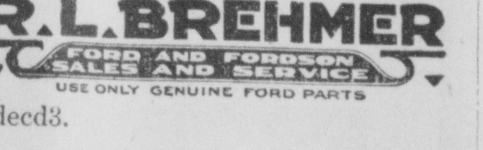

Despite the fact that the moon shone bright enough to make objects discernable quite a distance away last night, sneak thieves tore off a board on the garage of William Lemley who resides on the George Hitler farm near the Hitler-Ludwig cemetery and stripped his new Ford sedan.

The garage is located quite a distance from the house which is on a side road and about 10 o'clock Mr. Lemley reports hearing his dog making quite a commotion but he did not investigate as it was thought he might have seen a rabbit. Upon going to the barn this morning Mr. Lemley found the door of the garage locked but when he went to drive his car out he found that it was minus tires, battery, tools and accessories.

Mr. Lemley has made a resolution to make a thorough investigation the next time his dog barks at night.

EMPLOYEES OF U. S. STEEL CORPORATION

BENEFIT WHEN A DIVIDEND OF $200,000,000 IS PAID

Biggest Christmas Melon Cut In Years—The Firm Has Made Two Billion Dollars In Twenty-Five Years—Gigantic Bull Movement Started In Wall Street Friday.

Directors of the U. S. Steel corporation playing Santa Claus to their own stockholders by cutting a Christmas melon of over $200,000,000, started a gigantic "bull" movement Friday in the New York stock market, which in a single day added hundreds of millions of dollars to the combined market value of leading industrial and railroad securities and spread the Christmas spirit to millions of stockholders.

Common stock of the U. S. Steel corporation changed hands in enormous volume, scoring an extreme gain of 5 5-8 points by touching 160 1/2, the highest price ever recorded, on total sales of over 600,000 shares.

The day's transactions in this issue comprised nearly one-fourth of the day's entire volume of business and involved a turnover of nearly $100,000,000. The stock closed a point below the top, so that the aggregate market value of the 5,083,025 shares outstanding was increased over $23,500,000 during the day.

The new "when issued" stock, which will not be distributed until after the formal approval of the stockholders next spring, was traded in on the New York curb market, selling between 115 and 116 7-8. Based on the average price of the steel dividend it is worth approximately $235,000,000 to the 90,000 stockholders of the corporation.

The day's transaction in U. S. Steel common fell far short of the daily record turnover of 875,000 shares, which was established in the wild market which followed the "leak" on the late President Wilson's peace note, December 21, 1916.

The steel "melon" while representing the partial distribution of an undivided surplus of over $500,000,000, which had been built up since the corporation was established a little over 25 years ago, was widely hailed in brokerage and banking circles as an expression of confidence in the business outlook for 1927.

While no dividend action on the new stock will be taken before the April meeting of directors, Wall street recalled that last spring Chairman Elbert H. Gary, in discussing the possibility of a stock dividend, said:

"Of course if this were done it would add to the amount of dividends on the common stock."

This statement of the veteran head of the corporation was used as the basis for the hope that the present $7 annual rate, which is equivalent to $9.80 on the present issue, would be maintained on the new stock.

Earnings of the corporation have exceeded two billion dollars under Mr. Gary's management, the average for the 10-year period ending in 1925 being $18.26 a share.

While huge blocks of steel common stock regarded as a gilt edge business man's investment for the last decade or longer, are held by large banks, insurance companies and wealthy individuals, numerically nearly half of the corporation's stockholders are employees, ranging from Chairman Gary to day laborers in the mills.

The stock is one of the most widely distributed in the country, if not in the world, one of the most distinguished stockholders being President Coolidge, who was listed in the last annual list of stockholders as the owner of 50 shares.

Employees of the corporation subscribed for 70,000 shares of stock earlier in the year at $136 a share. Subsequently, they saw it go down over 10 points, below that figure but few men sold and their confidence in the corporation apparently has been justified by the recent sharp appreciation in value.

While stock market observers realized that a distribution on steel common was only a matter of time, few of them expected it Thursday. Even when reports of a special meeting of directors were confirmed, the rumors that it was called to act on the proposed resignation of Chairman Gary found more believers than those suggesting a possible "Christmas dividend," which explains the heavy selling of the stock Thursday afternoon after an opening display of strength.

While Gary's plans are known only to himself, the stock dividend announcement put a stop, temporarily at least to the reports of his retirement.

A. B. FALL AND H. F. SINCLAIR FACING TRIAL

Were Indicted as Result of Leasing of the Teapot Dome Naval Reserve in Wyoming.

The scheduled arraignment of Albert B. Fall and Harry F. Sinclair, oil millionaire, on charges of conspiracy to defraud the government, was postponed until next Tuesday by Justice Jennings Bailey in district supreme court.

A crowded court docket caused the change in plans after Sinclair and his large staff of lawyers, as well as attorneys representing Fall, had waited outside the court room for more than an hour.

The two men were indicted as a result of the leasing of the Teapot Dome Naval Reserve in Wyoming to Sinclair's Oil company. The transaction took place when Fall was secretary of the interior.

The former cabinet minister was not in court, his attorneys having arranged with government counsel to have him notified as soon as his presence was needed.

Tuesday's arraignment will be preceded by an hour's argument by prosecution and defense counsel on a demurrer filed by Sinclair's attorneys.

The court told the attorneys that as soon as the demurrer is disposed of he will hear the pleas of the defendants.

Mr. Fall and Edward L. Doheny were resting Friday following their acquittal of a conspiracy charge growing out of the leasing of Ekl Hills Naval Reserve.

The Doheny family will return to Los Angeles, where they will have a Christmas reunion.

Army More Religious Than Civilians, Claim

Washington—The army is more religious than the rest of the country, according to the army chaplains.

Figures presented by Chief Chaplain John T. Axton in his annual report showed a total attendance of more than 1,800,000 at army religious services during the year, or an average of 13 times for every soldier. Though statistics for the entire country are not available, this average is believed much higher than for civilian church attendance.

DYE GROOMING GOVERNOR VIC FOR PRESIDENT

"Feeler" Was Bid For Support—Smith and McAdoo are "Impossible"

In a carefully worded statement issued at Washington Thomas E. Dye, chairman of the Democratic state committee of Ohio, all but projected Governor A. V. Donahey of Ohio, into the contest for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1928.

Instead of launching a genuine Donahey for president boom, as was predicted before he came to Washington, Dye mere put forth "a feeler" that was interpreted immediately as an indirect bid for support of the presidential candidacy of Ohio's third term governor.

Dye definitely allied himself with the forces in the Democratic party that are seeking to forestall the nomination of Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York, thereby strengthening the belief in Smith quarters that the Donahey candidacy is being brought forth at the time as part of a nationwide campaign to check the spread of Smith sentiment.

The Ohio chairman was careful to disclaim authority to speak for Governor Donahey, but the effect of his statement was to place the Donahey movement in the same category with others of like nature, which have for its object the elimination of Governor Smith as a presidential possibility.

After professing admiration for New York's governor and a desire to see him in the White House, Dye dismissed his chances and those of William G. McAdoo, of California, with the one word "impossible." In his opinion their elimination from consideration is essential to Democratic success in 1928. He reaches this conclusion regretfully "from a devotion to the Democratic party and its patriotic mission to our country."

Denmark Bans Poker; Players Cry "Misdeal!"

Copenhagen.—Danish poker players are not at all satisfied with the Supreme court's decree today, outlawing stud, as well as draw, poker. They contend that their case was lost on a technicality, and that they, therefore, are entitled to another deal, or rather, hearing. The court held that poker was unlawful, as it came within the meaning of the prohibiting gambling clause of the penal code.

The Lord Helps
Those . . .

By CORONA REMINGTON

(Copyright.)

HELEEN JOYNSON dropped her suitcase in the middle of the tiny living-room floor and stared about her with disgust.

"Uncle Eph! I'd be a-shamed! You can't tell me you don't know how to sweep even if you are a man. Why, the dirt in this place's enough to bring the rats and roaches. And I nearly broke my neck through that hole in porch. Surely you don't expect me to live here!"

"Seems to me like if it's good enough for your uncle it's good enough for you. Besides, orphans can't always be choosers. I'm poor and I know it. 'Fore Emmy died we was poor, but things has gone from bad to worse since she went. Seems like I ain't got a chance. Everything and everybody's agin me, but the Lord will provide. I've still got my faith in my religion left, and that's all that keeps me alive!"

"Well, I haven't much faith in your kind of religion anyway. It's wrecked more lives and excused more laziness than any other doctrine in the world.
Do you suppose if you sit there in the middle of a work day plying yourself and smoking that dreadful old cornob pipe that the Lord's going to send manna out of the heavens as He did in the days of the Israelites? There's one thing certain, Uncle Eph, I don't have to stay here and unless you get up and get to work I'm leavin'. Good smart orphans can find plenty of places to go. Don't you worry about that. Now, it's high time the garden was planted. You'd better go hitch up and start plowin'. I'll get this mess cleaned up and cook some supper."

"It's too late to commence today.
It's most two o'clock," he protested.

"Never too late to mend," she corrected. "And remember one thing—
if you want any supper you'd better plow. The Lord helps those who help themselves!"

She nodded significantly at him and moved toward the kitchen door on a tour of inspection. Dirt and disorder greeted her everywhere. By night the little house was a different place. It fairly reeked with the pleasant odors of fresh, clean air and soapy water, and when Uncle Eph came in from his labors a tempting supper greeted him.
At six the next morning she called him.

"If you aren't down by 6:30, no
breakfast," she warned.

At 6:28 he came downstairs with an agility surprising in a middle-aged man.

"Kinder sore and stiff," he complained. "Don't reckon I'll be able to do nothin' today."

"Oh, yes, a little more plowin'!! soon limber you up again. It's just because you aren't accustomed to working."

He glared at her across the table.
"Well, by Heck, I ain't goin' to hit a lick today. Y'understand?" he roared at her.

"That's all right," she answered coolly. "No lick, no dinner."

He took the hint and fairly stuffed himself of sausage and pancakes and the noon hour passed without too much discomfort, but when five o'clock came and Helen showed no signs of cooking supper a feeling of terror gripped him. His own unpalatable cooking was scarcely eatable, and in less than twenty-four hours Helen's delectable meals had completely killed his appetite for his own efforts.

Weeks passed in this way—back and forth—outbreaks of rebellion followed by starvation and then silent acquiescence to Helen's wishes. It was like working with a balky mule, but a balky mule is better than no mule and by summer time the place had almost an air of prosperity. The garden flourished, the porch was mended, the roof patched, a coat of white paint put on the house and flowers blossomed everywhere. And it was the flower beds that had caused the worst rebellion. To take his precious strength and time to dig beds to stick a whole "passel" of seeds in that didn't do no one any good when they did come up! But he knew that hunger was his alternative, so he dug the flower beds.

The neighbors passing by stopped to gaze at the neat little place and often wondered how Helen had brought about the reform.

"Your place is sure lookin' good,"
said John Alton one day. "Now, nothin' I got aln' doin' no good. 'Pears like everything's agin me."

"The Lord helps those that help themselves," called Uncle Eph.
"That's my religion every time. Now, you go on home an' try it an' see if it don't work," he added significantly.

And Helen, back in the kitchen, heard and chuckled with glee.

"He stole my thunder, but he's welcome to it so long as he keeps on using it," she laughed. "Guess he's in a good humor now, and Mr. Alton's gone. I guess I'll go and break the news

HOW POSTALWORKERS ARE SPIED UPON

Galleries, Secret Corridors, Peep-Holes, Decoy Letters, Marked Money, All Play a Part.

"Spy galleries," secret corridors with peep-holes, decoy letters, marked money, chemicals that leave indelible tell-tale marks on thieving fingers—these are some of the devices used by the U. S. postal service in its continuous warfare to prevent theft from the mails.

Every day throughout the year, two men on the average are arrested in some post office, in your city or elsewhere, for stealing from the mail that passes through their hands, says an article prefaced by Postmaster General New and published in the December Elks' Magazine.

"So efficient are detective methods now employed by the government that it would seem that none but utter fools would succumb to the temptation to rifle from the mails," the article says. But department inspectors must practice eternal vigilance.

"Every important city in the country has a post office building that contains within its walls a maze of secret passageways linked by trapdoors and concealed ladders. These passageways are equipped with peep-holes and lattices and from them the postal inspectors keep watch on the men and women who handle and sort your letters and mine."

"Over 535 inspectors—detectives—are constantly engaged in tracking down petty thievery as well as larger postal robberies and hold-ups. Then send an average of 2,500 men a year to federal penitentiaries."

"The use of a special chemical which stains human skin and which cannot be washed off is one of the latest methods of apprehending the stealing post office clerk. If an employee comes under suspicion and other methods of detecting him have failed, a decoy letter, containing this treacherous chemical powder is sent through the office in which he works. As he leaves his work, his hands are casually examined, and if he has tampered with the decoy he is betrayed."

"How postal thieves are caught is illustrated by the fate that overtook a post office clerk in an Eastern city."

"Some of the letters which had been stolen were addressed to a business concern which frequently received small amounts of currency through the mail. Accordingly, the postal inspector on the case prepared a dozen test letters, all addressed to this company, and all containing marked money. They were dropped in a letter box."

"That night the inspector entered the observation gallery and tip-toed to the lattice through which he could look down upon the suspected clerk at his work. With him he carried a folding camp-stool, for his wait might be for many hours."

"About three in the morning, he observed something that made him alert. The clerk had tossed a letter into a little used pigeon-hole of his desk. Soon, another letter went into the same place; then others. Finally the watcher behind the lattice saw the clerk reach with a swift movement for the letters he had tossed into the pigeon-hole and stuff them into his pocket. Then the clerk started for the wash-room. It was the old story; he would remove the currency and destroy the letters."

"But the inspector was there ahead of him. Caught with the marked money in his possession, the clerk confessed he had been stealing for many weeks."

"One of the first things that is done when an employee comes under suspicion is to check up on his private life to ascertain whether he is under some pressing financial strains or whether he is leading a loose life."

"These men are not hardened criminals," says the Elks' Magazine article. "They are not possessed of skill. They take one letter under the compulsion of necessity or desire, and they are as little able to be satisfied as a lover is to be content with one kiss. It is a pathetic feature of this sort of attack on the mails."

"Sometimes, postal clerks in smaller towns open letters merely out of curiosity or in order to secure information against a rival in love or business."

"A postmaster of an Illinois town went to jail recently after being trapped with stained fingers. His term was about to expire and he had opened letters from a congressman addressed to a rival candidate for the postmastership."

"Not even a postoffice inspector may violate the sanctity of the seal on a letter in the United States mail. One inspector was dismissed because in his zeal to trap some men suspected of being thieves, he opened letters addressed to them."

Bill Tilden Speaks on Many Evils of Gridiron

College football is a professional sport and the players might as well be paid for their efforts, in the opinion of William T. Tilden II, former tennis champion, as expressed in an interview in the Harvard Crimson. Tilden deplored what he termed the over-emphasis of technicalities in maintaining amateur standing.

Football, the tennis champion is quoted as saying, "commercializes the collective ability of the players, although not the individual. Of course this money does not go to the player but it might just as well, for commercialization presents all the evils of professionalism. The same situation holds in the realm of tennis."

"Therefore if we are to have this commercialism of all sports, why not pay the individual player?"

INSTITUTES • FUNDAMENTALLY INSPIRATIONAL

Farmers' Institutes have changed in forty years. Turning from emphasis on how to farm to emphasize on how to live, Ohio Farmers' institutes nowadays serve as community conventions. "The Modern Farmers' institute is a community convention in which every community interest is considered," says F. L. Allen, state supervisor of Farmers' institutes at the Ohio State university in describing the programs. Institutes bring together people free from community prejudice. They are a vehicle that carries the rural policy and a place to develop leadership in rural communities. The institutes act to coordinate community organizations and their activity because they provide the only place in a rural community where everybody gets together on a civic proposition.

Requests for speakers and discussion group subjects show that a real community thought is growing. Aside from the necessary technical information sought in productive activity they are thinking of community health, schools, churches, roads books, social recreation, club work for boys, girls and women, and marketing on a community wide cooperative scale.

Last year at 3645 Farmers' institute sessions held in 745 rural communities there were 647,000 people.

Their merit lies chiefly in that they are fundamentally inspirational in character. The institute is a community forum, a small chautauqua that fosters thoughts on community building.

U. S. STAMP LICKERS NEEDN'T FEAR RESULTS

In Danger of No Bad Effects, As Glue Is Composed of Good Foodstuffs.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Regardless of the sanitary question as the licking of postage stamps as it might affect others, the lick-er has no need to fear harmful effects from the operation.

On the contrary, the postoffice department says the gum is really foodstuffs material, and they are afraid to make it more palatable by adding flavoring because that might be an incentive for users to remove too much of the adhesive, and thus get the post-office people into trouble with an overload of mail to be sent back for postage.

The gum used has been so good that many have asked for its composition. It is composed of 88 per cent cassava dextrin, a starch obtained from certain South American plants which is used in making tapioca and cassava bread. Ten per cent of corn dextrin and about 2 per cent glucose completes the mixture.

The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

WILL OPEN HOMES TO LEGIONNAIRES

Assurance by Col. Yves Picot, representative of the France government, that members of the American Legion who go to Paris for the ninth annual convention in September of 1927 will be received as brothers, is being fulfilled. The Parisians will open their homes to the 30,000 Legionnaires during convention week. The hospitality of the French people is rapidly solving a formidable housing problem that faced the France convention committee.

Housing of Legionnaires in Paris was made more difficult because of the facts that there are few large hotels in the city and because of the fluctuating exchange. The office of the France convention committee of the American Legion, 12 rue du Felder, Paris, under the direction of Edwin W. Thorn succeeded in signing up 15,000 rooms for Legionnaires convention week before reservations opened on November 15.

The French people are reticent when it comes to taking in strangers, but a suggestion of M. Jacques Per-leard in "Intransigent" that the homes of the Parisians be thrown open to the Legionnaires gained almost instant approval. The movement was heartily seconded by M. Charles Bertrand, president of the Federation Interallée des Combattants, representative of French veterans associations.

Col. Yves Picot.

"The debt settlement has nothing to do with the touching fraternity, that of blood spilled in common, which united us with our American comrades," Bertrand said.

"I had the honor to be received in the United States by the American Legion on two different occasions, the first time in the illustrious company of our venerated Marshal Foch, the second time as president of the Federation Interallée des Combattants. I shall not attempt to describe the greeting which Marshal Foch received. It was triumphal, delirious. There were splendid receptions in the larger cities, and that given us in New Orleans where the convention was held was unforgettable. In that city we were lodged in the homes of the inhabitants. What generous hospitality, and above all, what fraternal solicitude was shown us by our comrades in the American Legion. A French soldier does not forget such hours. I gladly offer a place under my roof to an American comrade during his stay in Paris."

Reservations being received indicate that the France convention will be representative of all outfits mustered in the first A. E. F. Among the first reservations to be received at national headquarters of the Legion were those of Gen. John J. Pershing, war-time commander of the A. E. F., and Howard P. Savage, national commander of the American Legion. The France convention committee has prepared a two-color steamship folder giving full information concerning the Paris journey and instructions for the making of convention reservations. Legionnaires contemplating the Paris trip may obtain the folder by writing to the France Convention Committee, National Headquarters, the American Legion, Indianapolis, Ind.

105,377 Veterans Carry $816,614,444 Insurance

Reinstatements and conversions of insurance fell off rapidly following the passage of the act July 2, 1926, which extended the time limits on insurance. Watson B. Miller, chairman of the American Legion national rehabilitation committee, has announced.

The United States Veterans' bureau figures of October 31, 1926, showed 105,377 World war veterans carrying war risk insurance policies totaling in value $816,614,444. On that date 462,107 veterans had converted their war risk insurance into some form of permanent government insurance, amounting in all to $1,968,711,876.

OHIO REPRESENTATIVE SENTATIVE

To Introduce New Pension Bill In the Interest of Civil War Veterans and War Widows.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—Representative Thomas A. Jenkins of the Tenth Ohio district has introduced a new general pension bill, under which every Civil war soldier who served 90 days or longer would automatically receive $72 a month for service, or $90 per month if totally helpless or blind.

"A good many soldiers," said Jenkins, "are too modest or conscientious to present a claim. They are just as much entitled to a pension as others, and my bill would take care of them."

Jenkins' bill also would be a boon to a great many soldiers' widows who are now denied the maximum widows' allowance of $50 per month. Under existing law if a widow married a Civil war soldier at any time after the Civil war ended she is denied the maximum, although she may have cared for a disabled soldier husband all through a long life. The Jenkins bill provides that a Civil war soldier's widow who married her soldier husband at any time prior to June 27, 1905, shall be entitled to a pension of $50 a month. If she married him after June 27, 1905, but before June 27, 1915, she shall be entitled to $30 per month. Mr. Jenkins knows of one instance where the widow married immediately after the Civil war and waited on her practically helpless husband for 41 years until he died, yet she cannot under existing law obtain the pension of $50 per month.

Indians Without Salt

According to the "Handbook of American Indians," not all of the tribes of Indians were accustomed to using salt; whether from difficulty of procuring it, the absence of the habit, a repugnance for the mineral or for religious reasons, it is not always possible to say. Salt exists in enormous quantities in the United States, and it was not difficult for Indians to obtain it.

Two Fortunes

DRESSMAKING DISCUSSED BY A SPECIALIST

A well made dress fits well, is becoming to the wearer and emphasizes the lines of a correct posture.

A dress that fits as it should will not "hike out" in front, Jeanette Butler, home demonstration specialist in clothing at the Ohio State university observes. Even the way in which the sleeves are set adds to the lines of dress. They also add to the comfort of the wearer when they are set to the lines of the dress.

One of the simplest rules in dress construction that adds to the appearance and comfort of the finished work is the one that keeps the grain in the cloth running horizontally across the chest, between the shoulders, and over the bust and hip lines. Cloth that is made up any other way will almost without exception wrinkle, fit poorly, or hike out in front.

There are three points at which very small changes will correct a dress that does not hang straight. Miss Butler points out. A dart at the shoulder seam, under the arm, or at the hip line under the belt will generally do the trick.

Most silhouettes will require some adjustment at one or more of these three places to make the dress hang as it should. The darts are the means of adapting the garment to the figure of the wearer.

POLICEMAN IS ACCUSED AS CAN- TON PLOTTER

Testimony in McDermott Case Links Deposed Patrolman With Conspirators.

Canton, Dec. 17.—Incidents linking the alleged murderers of Don R. Mellett with deposed members of Canton's police force were related today to the jury trying Patrick Eugene McDermott for the crime.

One witness testified that Louis Mazer, one of the indicted trio, on the night of the murder conferred in the home of Doll Carey, alleged underworld character, with Floyd Streitenberger, then a police detective, and that Mazer later departed carrying a revolver.

John A. McDonald, a police officer, testified that Ben Rudner, third of those indicted, conferred with S. A. Lengel, then police chief, in his office the night of the murder.

Previously a city official had testified that Rudner and McDermott visited headquarters together on the night of the murder, today, confronted by Rudner's younger brother, Eddie, the recalled witness said it might have been young Rudner and not Mc-Dermott who accompanied Ben that night.

Prosecutor C. B. McClintock said at the close of today's court session that the state's one remaining witness will tell of an additional connection between Rudner and the police department.

HOW THE WEATHER

Helped George Washington Win a Battle.

Upon so slight a factor as the weather rested the hopes of the Colonial Armies at one time during the Revolution, according to Hugh Fullerton in an article in this week's Liberty. It was at Christmastide, 1776, just before the Battle of Trenton, Fullerton points out. General Washington with his small army was stationed just across the Delaware River from Trenton, in Pennsylvania. He planned to cross the river under cover of darkness and surprise the British and Hessian troops stationed in Trenton.

"The fate of the United States depended upon the weather," the writer points out. "On the night of December 20, the weather turned bitter cold. The river, as far as the falls above Trenton, froze solid. On that Sunday the British prepared to cross on the ice and march to Philadelphia, but decided to wait until the ice was solid enough to permit the transport of cannon."

"All day Sunday Washington anxiously watched the weather. On Monday the weather turned suddenly warm. A heavy thaw set in. The already swollen river broke up the ice. Tuesday was still warmer, with a warm rain that made the roads a sea of mud."

"This delayed the British, as the writer points out, and enabled the Americans to cross the river at night and surprise the much larger enemy forces in the midst of holiday revelry, putting them to rout. This bit of strategy, now known as the Battle of Trenton, gave the revolutionists new courage and undoubtedly contributed to the final success of the revolution."

HUSBAND SLAYS HIMSELF AFTER SHOOTING WIFE
Glass Worker Blows Head Off With Shotgun as Climax of Quarrel Over Divorce.

Lancaster, Dec. 19.—Elton Smith, 35, glass worker, is dead, his head blown off with a shotgun in his own hand; his wife, Olive, 21, is in Lancaster Hospital suffering from a load of buckshot in her side, and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Aimee LeJeune, is on the verge of a nervous breakdown.
Smith and his wife were engaged in a divorce suit, and tonight he concealed himself near the garage at the rear of her mother's home.
She put the machine away and, on her way to the house, Smith shot her. Her mother heard the shot and ran to her daughter's side.
Smith leveled the shotgun at Mrs. LeJeune. Mrs. LeJeune ran and was lost to Smith in the darkness.
After Smith gave up the chase he turned the gun on himself.
They have one child, 4 years old.

40 MILLION BARREL APPLE CROP
Federal statisticians this month revising their estimates of the apple crop, report that it will amount to about 40,000,000 barrels in round numbers as compared with 33,000,000 last year. This indicates that the people of the United States will have an abundance of apples this winter and that there will be a great variety of them from which to select for winter storage.
The box apple crop comes chiefly from the western states while the barrel apples come from eastern, mid-western and southern territory.
New England is reported to have a 2,110,000 barrel crop while exceptionally heavy crops are reported from Virginia and West Virginia. There are apples aplenty to give everybody his apple a day and make life a burden for the doctor. The quality of the crop is unusually high and already the fancy grade apples coming to the market are attracting many buyers. As one customer remarked, "They look too pretty to eat."
Apples for centerpieces for banquets and formal dinners have become popular decorative features and the combinations of dark red, light red and yellow have been used to excellent effect.
Apples of unusual beauty are displayed in every fruit store and green grocery this fall. Prices are more reasonable than they have been in a long time.
